WINDOW Cut in Man's HEART

DARING DOCTOR SAVES A LIFE

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 23 (U.S.).—Dr. Claude S. Beck of Cleveland succeeded in cutting a "window" into a man's heart, thereby saving the life of a young man whose vital organ was slowly turning to stone.

A gallery of eminent surgeons watched the intricate, delicate operation performed in the surgical unit of the University of California hospital here. The patient's heart was exposed for more than an hour.

Purpose of the daring operation, it was revealed, was to remove the pericardial sac to permit blood to reach a "punched heart" and then be pumped back through the coronary blood vessels.

The patient, a 35-year-old man, was threatened with "stroke" if the heart was not saved. Medical men call the condition "chronic obstructive pericarditis."

Young, kind and competent, the patient in new moments of heart surgery, watched his surgical team, which had performed the operation, and he expressed his deep appreciation.

The patient was brought to the hospital by the University of California Medical Center, and he was expected to be in good condition today.

Working on the patient directly over the heart, Dr. Beck cut through blood vessels, pumping them as he went. Cutting deeper into the operation, each side of which was held firmly by surgical assistants, Dr. Beck reached the heart.

When first exposed, the heart appeared as a large, fleshy, pinkish-red mass. Watching surgeons peered intently down from the gallery above, but were able to perceive in movement.

The heart that should have been beating, thinking, pumping life-giving blood, lay motionless. It was held in rigid immobility by the surrounding membrane, and it was held in it as tightly as a new glove.

Dr. Beck called this condition "chronic obstructive pericarditis," and he said that it was a very serious condition.

Working with increasing care to avoid cutting into the heart itself, Dr. Beck slowly dissected the membrane, and he said that it was a very serious condition.

AS I SEE IT

By DAMON RUNYON

Several hundred of the most minded gentlemen of the United States are talking of entering the New York-Paris air race in August.

To anticipate our editors who will presently be asking the reason for this race, let me say that the reason is $70,000, cash money, to the winner. "We make the greatest airplanes in the world," says Jimmy Matern.

It was this Mr. Jimmy Matern, of Texas, who flew from New York to Berlin with a companion in 1932, then in 1933 started on a solo flight around the world with a loop from Floyd Bennett Field to a spot near Oslo, in Norway.

He was eventually forced down in Siberia, 750 miles from home, and the plane was cracked up. He was rescued by fur traders, rode a Russian plane into Nome, and then traveled back to Bennett Field by an American plane.

"What I really want to make the race to Paris for, besides the $70,000, is to recover my old motor," confided Mr. Jimmy Matern. "I understand it is now in Moscow."

A lot of water has sloshed around in the Atlantic since May 20, 1927, when a slender, blond, unknown youth named Charles A. Lindbergh, suddenly took off from Roosevelt Field in the "Spirit of St. Louis," and a nation stood still in breathless wonder and anxiety for thirty-three hours.

Then came that flash from Bourget Field, in Paris, that the young American had arrived safely, the first and last man to make that trip alone, and the whole world stood in awe with a roar of acclaim.

The marvel of that solitary journey in what would now be regarded as a mere chicken coop, still endures. The name of Lindbergh is immortal. The New York-to-Paris race is surely needed to commemorate his feat, but it ought to give up a lot of accounts.

It will prove nothing, except perhaps that the hazards of Lindbergh's flight have been greatly reduced by the advance in flying science, and the improvement in airplanes. Mr. Jimmy Matern thinks that the modern jay ought to make the trip in eighteen hours, stopping for lunch.

The entries are subject to the approval of the National Aeronautics Association of America, which can reject an entry without giving a reason for the rejection. We presume this is a precaution against crooks, and against the foolish, human, and mechanical.

It may be a precaution against the ladies, too. Nothing definite is said about the ladies in the conditions, as we understand it, but we are inclined to doubt that they are wanted in the race.

It may not be discrimination. It may be that the promoters well understand that a lot of lovely ladies went canvassing for backers for the race, it would be unfair competition to the gentlemen who will also be looking for backing.

BRITISH CREW BALKS AT WAR BLOOD CASH'

Refusing an $80,000 bonus, which they termed a "bribe and blood money," to carry a cargo of nitrate to Seville, Spain, 25 members of the crew of the British freighter Linnah, today expressed their refusal to accept a bribe of $80,000, which was offered by the British consul-general in Boston.

After a brief conference with a committee representing the crew, Ford announced he was going to cable the British Board of Trade asking what action it should take.

The crew, according to the spokesman, Alex Holmes, a fireman, have refused to present from Boston to Hager, Va., where the cargo, to be used in the manufacture of gun powder for rebel forces in Spain, was to be loaded.

Robson, before going to see Ford, said they would demand that the British trip be canceled to let the ship be discharged here and sent back to England. The committee was accompanied by counsel, Attorney John C. Jones.

"The crew is against being made a party to the Fascists in their suppression of the people of Spain," the spokesman declared.

ONE BILLION DOLLARS
PAID OUT IN BENEFITS BY
SUN LIFE OF CANADA
SINCE FIRST POLICY WAS ISSUED IN 1871
SECURITY SERVICE
WORLD WIDE

To Policyholders and The Public
Another milestone of achievement in public service has been passed by the Company during 1936. Of the many significant features of the Annual Report, perhaps the most noteworthy is that during sixty years of operation the Sun Life of Canada has paid in benefits to its policyholders and beneficiaries more than One Billion Dollars. These benefits, made possible by the skill and foresight of men and women brought together for mutual protection, have made a notable contribution to the sum of human happiness and national well-being.

Life assurance is a great co-operative enterprise by which millions of policyholders are enabled to provide financial security for their dependants and themselves. Its contributions to the public welfare are continuous and ever-expanding. The savings of policyholders in the form of premiums, invested in Government securities and in basic industries, are an important factor in national progress and stability, while the benefits distributed maintain homes and lessen the demands for public and private relief.

Young Peggy Garcia, hatcheck beauty in the Rubinoff $500, 600 heart halm suit (who really is Pauline Taylor) rushed into the arms of her father in Roanoke, Va., as there was talk of perjury charges against her.

New York, Feb. 23 (INS)—Supreme Court Justice Salvatore Coffin today granted a one-day postponement of Peggy Garcia's $500,000 breach of promise suit against David Rubinoff, radio violinist.

The justice's action followed receipt of a telegram from the Rubinoff's mother, saying he had inserted "suspicious new evidence in Virginia, which naturally benefits his client's case."

Justice Coffin ruled the telegram from the Rubinoff and Mrs. Rubinoff's counsel, Abraham J. Hirsch, should be filed.

ANN MARSTERS IN THE MOVIES

Hula Hula Girls Make Picturesque Scene in Studio

In last Sunday's Boston Sunday Advertiser, the eighth article in the series, "ANN MARSTERS IN THE MOVIES," told how Boston's noted girl reporter began her work in the role of a hula hula girl in the Paramount production, "Waikiki Wedding," starring Bing Crosby. In the ninth chapter today, Miss Marsters carries the reader through other scenes of the pictures and discloses the secrets of how voices are recorded on the films.

By ANN MARSTERS

(Copyright, 1937, by the Boston Evening American. Reproduction in whole or in part prohibited.)

Hollywood, Cal., Feb. 23.—This is the most picturesque movie set I have ever seen. And most of the people on it are picturesque, too.

I no longer feel strange in my grass skirt and my bright flowers. My hula costume is completely appropriate. It makes me belong to this bit of jungle with its masses of fern, its towering palms and its bulky banyan trees.

"Waikiki Wedding" is in the making—and that is why our tropical paradise must be spoiled by a few jarring notes. The directors and the various technicians look out of place. Even the star, Bing Crosby, doesn't belong. He is dressed in a blue cotton yachman's outfit, and so is his pal, Bob Burns.

Dyed-In-Wool

They are shamefully pale, too, compared with my own luscious tan. Even my toes have been bathed in a dark brown liquid. In fact, if I had a different kind of a face, you couldn't tell me from a dyed-in-the-wool hula-hula girl.

"All right, children," says Director Frank Tuttle, all of a sudden. "Let's make pictures."

The extras do not clap their hands with glee, or anything like that. Most of them were born in the midst of real banyan trees, and they have retained that languid manner, which is more or less their birthright.

But when we are finally assembled in our places, I must admit that we make a very impressive picture. A row of dancing girls are in the foreground, wearing straw skirts and yellow pom-poms in their hair. Garlands of multi-colored flowers are draped in a long line from shoulder to shoulder. (It is too bad that they are able to see the scene only in black and white.)

Light It!

I am in the background, in case you'd like to know, sitting with a group of extras on the steps of a little thatched hut. The scene belongs, mainly, to the dancing girls who will do a bit of eccentric hip-swaying in honor of the native wedding.

"All right, light it," calls the director, and a flood of warm light pours over our faces.

Then, from the mouth of a huge loud speaker, comes a haunting native melody. It is the song we are supposed to be singing and we make our mouths form the shape of the syllables as the camera begins to roll.

Perhaps you didn't know it, but all the music and songs in a picture are recorded separately, on records.

And when the picture is actually being taken, the music is "played back" into the scene. For instance, when you hear Bing Crosby sing in this picture, he won't really be singing during the time of any particular action. He'll just be making his mouth move, in coordination with his own voice which he hears coming through the loud speaker.

Why It's Done

This, you should understand, is a very necessary device on Hollywood's part. You couldn't expect an actor to sing his songs over and over again, all through the endless retakes of each scene. It would ruin his voice, and besides, it is difficult enough to get the action perfect without worrying about how one's voice is coming.

So the music plays and the dancing girls sway their hips and stamp their feet in a weird kind of rhythm. Native boys are seated here and there on the ground, keeping time to the music by pounding on various Hawaiian instruments.

Into the midst of this comes a little native dancing girl. She is about 9 years old and has come all the way from Honolulu to do this dance in "Waikiki Wedding."

Dancing the Hula Hula

THAT'S THE POSE—Dance Director Leroy Prinz of "Waikiki Wedding," the Paramount production in which Ann Marsters has the role of a hula hula girl, takes time between scenes to show the Boston Evening American's feature writer just how the hula hula dance should be done. And, of course, as Ann was wearing the grass skirt and all, she had to have the instruction.

Her name, I learn, is Kuulei DeClerq, and her father is publisher of a Hawaiian newspaper. She herself is an exquisite child, with a skin so finely smooth and so delicately tinted that it seems almost translucent. I am told that she is a protégée of Princess Kawanakoa of Hawaii, and has been an official dancer at entertainments given in honor of visiting dignitaries.

Look Happy!

While she is dancing and while the native girls are away, too, in the background, are told to look happy and pretend to be singing. So I, conscientiously, look very happy. Between takes, one of the girls beside me says:

"You needn't bother to look like that. They're taking only our feet."

That was quite a blow. Had I got myself all dressed up in flowers and smeared all over with makeup just so my feet could be photographed?

Well, I ceased to look happy, and I became as languid as any native. I leaned back against a piazza post of my thatched house and looked in the tropical warmth of two-score movie lamps.

I could see Bing Crosby relaxing against a palm tree and looking upon the scene with a rather bored expression. He has been on the set since early morning waiting to be called upon to do some acting. But as one has paid much attention to him, and it is quite possible that he'll have to keep on waiting a few more hours. So will Bob Burns.

IN THE BACKGROUND—Ann (indicated by an arrow) spent the first scene in which she appeared as a hula hula girl, in "Waikiki Wedding," in the background on the steps of a thatched cottage with other extras, as pictured above. The scene was devoted to the dancers—and Ann says she hopes more than her feet will be photographed in the next scene. Tomorrow's chapter may tell.

Never Complain

But it wouldn't occur to either of them to complain about such treatment—because it wouldn't do them the slightest bit of good. A movie set is no place for temperamental—no place for temperamental—in spite of what you've heard. And can you imagine a less temperamental pair than Bing Crosby and Bob Burns?

It is usually the assistant director who shouts those words—and he says them so frequently during a day's shooting of a picture, that they must haunt him in his sleep.

A hula falls over the set, until the director calls "Camera." Then the music begins and the dance is repeated.

This time, wonder of wonders! Tuttle says:

"That's fine. Print it." The next scene will include another native dance—and I wonder if it will also include a little more of me than just my feet.

Anyway, I am taking no chances. I follow the hardworker to comb my long black tresses and arrange my tiara of flowers ers at a more becoming angle.

So, with her hair dressed, the reporter-actress and author of this series is ready to appear in further scenes in "Waikiki Wedding," and to tell the story of these scenes in the tenth chapter of "ANN MARSTERS IN THE MOVIES" in tomorrow's Boston Evening American. Follow this series daily in the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser.

This about walking in, turning around and walking right out again. Rurs Chatterton landed in town Friday from London and is leaving today flying to New York, and taking the first boat back. It is the stage that is calling her to star in the picture and the chance to play under the name of George Bernard Shaw's "Pygmalion" or "The Constant Wife."

These are the plays which she has been playing for the last week before the picture. But she has also had several financial offers to make English movies but because of her financial condition, she has been hesitant about accepting them.

The authors who figure in the picture are George Bernard Shaw, Noel Coward, and Rex Beach. The picture is a comedy and is a success story for some time.

George III Coins Found On Beach

LEWIS, Feb. 23 (AP)—Several hundred copper coins, issued under the reign of George III of England and bearing dates from 1774 to 1782, were picked up along the ocean front today near Indian River inlet, just south of Leves.

Several told a legislative committee that the coins were "found" for Professor Murray. Murray said the coins had "more value than most members of the public welfare commission."

JUDGE LANDIS READY TO BLAST BASEBALL SCHOOLS

AUSTEN LAKE

The Bees Buzz Off
To Life of Luxury
In the Southland

THIS IS TUESDAY. I AM TOMORROW THOSE who are traveling South with the Boston Bees will be surprised to find that the weather is not what it was in the North. The autumn's dry cotton stalks and corn stubble will be standing in sun-blessed fields. There will be black magpies dreaming in the doorways of unpainted shanties, kinky kids romping in grassless lawns, tired men sucking corn-cob pipes over fence-rails. All nature will be asleep and the only signs of life will be among the turkey buzzards which wheel above the pine groves and the razzle-dazzle which rent in the gray sky.

Judge Landis

Landis, who is traveling South with the Boston Bees, is investigating the schools, which former major leaguers, with the assistance of some of the present stars, are operating in the South.

THE SUNSHINE-PLEASURE PEOPLE

THE SUNSHINE-PLEASURE PEOPLE are the people of the South. They are the people who are the most happy and contented people in the world. They are the people who are the most generous and the most kind. They are the people who are the most honest and the most true. They are the people who are the most brave and the most courageous. They are the people who are the most loyal and the most devoted. They are the people who are the most patriotic and the most patriotic.

THE CENTURIANS

BEYOND THE BRICK FIELD FENCE OF THE Bees' park, there are diamonds where fortune-tellers, alchemists, and other charlatans are busy. They are the people who are the most happy and contented people in the world. They are the people who are the most generous and the most kind. They are the people who are the most honest and the most true. They are the people who are the most brave and the most courageous. They are the people who are the most loyal and the most devoted. They are the people who are the most patriotic and the most patriotic.

DESIGN FOR LIVING BY THE PELICANS

OUTSIDE IN CAMP BAY ARE PELICANS, and other birds, who are the most happy and contented people in the world. They are the people who are the most generous and the most kind. They are the people who are the most honest and the most true. They are the people who are the most brave and the most courageous. They are the people who are the most loyal and the most devoted.
